Tasks set	In this lesson element, you will identify different types of communication technology used in business. You will be then given a number of different situations for which you will have to justify which type of technology would be best to use.
How this links to the exam specification	Unit 1 requires an understanding of employability and the communication skills used within an IT environment
How to complete the task:	Download and save the Communication Technology PowerPoint – the link is provided in the next section. Try Activity 1 on slide 5 and then look at the solutions on slide 6. Please note the answer to the question on slide 6 is “All the technologies are used to communicate”. On Slide 7, change the title “Justification” to “Description”. In rows A to F, add the names of the communication technologies listed on slide 6. For each communication technology, describe what it is, give examples of where it might be used and try and list the advantages and disadvantages it has as a type of communication technology. You may have to copy the table to a Word file or reduce the size of the font to stop the table overflowing the slide. Make a list of the websites’ addresses (URLs) that you use for your research Look at slides 9 to 18. Each slide has a scenario labelled A to J. Read each scenario and then use the table on slide 19 to recommend and justify a choice of communication technology solution. For example for Scenario A:  Communication technology: Email  Justification: Emails can be created using a professional layout and will not disturb working day of the IT companies (they can be read at any time). The read receipt function will allow Clare to know that her email has been read. She could attach her CV or a portfolio of her work to an email.
